

Emmett Harden, right, a docent at the Allensworth State Historical Park talks to Daniel Kimmel-Terra and his mom Jennifer Terra about Buffalo Soldiers. Harden, who is dressed as a member of the Union's 24th Infantry, was one of several volunteers at Saturday's Juneteenth celebration at the Veterans' Memorial Center. Wayne Tilcock/Enterprise photo

Local News

A touch of history

By Enterprise staff

From page A14 | June 23, 2013

Emmett Harden, right, a docent at the Allensworth State Historical Park talks to Daniel Kimmel-Terra and his mom Jennifer Terra about Buffalo Soldiers. Harden, who is dressed as a member of the Union's 24th Infantry, was one of several volunteers at Saturday's Juneteenth celebration at the Veterans' Memorial Center. This year's celebration highlighted the 150th anniversary of the Emancipation Proclamation. Juneteenth, which is short for June 19th, is a remembrance of that particular date in 1865. On that day, 2,000 Union soldiers arrived at Galveston, Texas, intent on enforcing the abolition of slavery.

0 Comments

Sort by Oldest ▼

Add a comment...

Facebook Comments Plugin

Enterprise staff

Story Archive